

Join us for a three-part webinar series — led by Contextual Bible Study (CBS) leaders from Brazil, South Africa, and the United States — that will train faith leaders, activists, and organizers to read biblical texts from the perspective of the marginalized, so they might be used as an effective tool for confronting systems of oppression in our communities.

St. Ambrose University
WEBINAR SERIES ON

Bible & Justice

No cost for participation.
Pre-registration is required.
Online sign-up for one or all sessions available at www.sau.edu/bible-justice.
Limit 20 per session.

with support from

Saturday, March 12 • 10 am ET / 9 am CT

Paulo Ueti, Brazilian theologian and New Testament bible scholar
Ueti serves as Latin America and Caribbean Regional facilitator of Anglican Alliance, is a member of Ecumenical Centre for Biblical Studies, Brazilian Association for Biblical Research, and a collaborator in the Landless People Movement and Via Campesina International.

Saturday, April 23 • 10 am ET / 9 am CT

Gerald West, Senior Professor in the School of Religion, Philosophy, and Classics, at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa
In addition to West's research on how the Bible is used in African liberation struggles, his involvement with the Ujamma research and community development center has critically engaged Bible with justice struggles including race, class, gender, HIV, sexuality, eco-justice, and disability.

Saturday, May 7 • 3 pm ET / 2 pm CT

Bob Ekblad, Presbyterian minister, Old Testament scholar, and a founder and co-director of Tierra Nueva in Burlington, Washington
Ekblad ministers at the New Earth Refuge retreat center in Washington. At Tierra Nueva-New Earth, he works to serve immigrants from Latin America, inmates, homeless people, and people struggling with addictions.

More information

Matthew J.M. Coomber, PhD, Assistant Professor of Theology, St. Ambrose University
Director, The Center and Library for the Bible and Social Justice
CoomberMatthewJM@sau.edu, 563/333-6041